IV. PRESENTATIONS/REPORTS/RECOGNITIONS

A. NEASC – Jason Finnie

• Mr. Finnie spoke about updates in the handbook and program of studies. The middle school is more in sync with the high school with regards to late work. You have the time equal to the period you are out to turn in assignments. There were some clarifications to the discipline code and consequences. They made modifications to options for written apologies or other forms of reparation -getting students to own what they’ve done. The high school program of studies was changed to be more in line with what colleges are looking for. English to college prep and renaming algebra to college prep and topics in calculus prep. They are making sure students aren’t taking too many PE and directed study classes. Only one PE class per day. Students can take one additional PE class beyond the 24 credits.

•
Mr. Finnie said NEASC will be arriving October 28. They will be here late morning and starting at 2:15-3:15 meeting with school committee members and parents. It would be great to have all of the school committee members there. He hopes at least one from each town will be represented. He will share the self-study document via email. This is done every 10 years. It starts with a self study of the 7 standards. Curriculum, instruction, assessments, core values and beliefs, governance, etc. This is a reflective process. Most of Monday is observations. Meetings with central office and administration, Superintendent, student groups, teacher groups, and paraprofessionals. Tuesday, they will finish up and begin writing reports. Tuesday evening they will start to present the reports. Some will present Wednesday morning. They are looking for strengths and needs. They vote to make sure what they observed is accurate and that everyone agrees. The final outcome of all of this is a list of strengths and needs. An affirmation of what they are doing well and what they may need.
